Draft of April 8, 2018 Location EWP Archives: 9.2 School Map Table Study

BACKGROUND:

This document contains a table listing pre-1968 schools in Loudoun County. Our goal has been to identify all of the “colored” and white public schools that existed prior to the end of segregation in 1968, plus a few private schools, the later to enable us to compare public and private education or to laud private schools that helped African-Americans.

Process: Whenever we hear about a school in the official records or newspapers or from interviews, we add it to the table. We then try to fully document it, including determining the physical location as close as possible.

If we can determine the physical location, it is listed on our digital map. We also plan to map bus routes in the future based on interviews and material in our archives.

Unfortunately, official records and media reports are not always complete. In addition, during segregation, rural Loudoun did not have street numbers. Gaps in our knowledge of the geography have emerged. For example, while a public school for white children probably existed in Round Hill by 1877, its precise location is unknown. Similarly, while a school for African-Americans existed on Route 719N near Bell Road, its precise location is also debated. (Thomas 2004, 109-119).

As for private schools, listing them can help us understand the differences in quality between white and “colored” education. Some white schools provided direct assistance to African-Americans, such as Fox Croft and Hill School. The owner of Foxcroft helped fund African-American education at St. Louis, Willisville and Grant schools. Hill School funneled Mellon Foundation money to art education by African Americans. Some private schools were established by the Freedman’s Bureau, Quakers and others to help African Americans between 1865 and 1870, such as the school in Leesburg managed by Caroline Thomas, who was the instructor for Edwin Washington, for whom the project has been named.

Field schools on farms and plantations were set up to educate workers and these were for whites. We have largely ignored them though some still stand like Oakham (Virginia Department of Historic Resources 2015) (Hamilton Roger’s). Some schools, though not relevant to Black education, are historically important in their own right, such as Dillon, which was the first school in Loudoun county. It was built in 1782 along the Great Road, a cow path between Leesburg and Williams Gap. The school was built to educate the children of James and Rebekah Dillon, Rebecca, Susannah, Mary, Moses and Abdon.

Special Report on School Construction and Enrollment Related Documents

Our sources of information are newspapers, official records from LCPS (Loudoun County Public Schools), records in the Archives of the Circuit Court of Loudoun County, the Balch Library, the Prosperity Baptist Church, the Lincoln Historical Society, the Lovettsville Preservation Foundation, the Waterford Historical Society, the Purcellville Historical Society, the Library of Virginia and Virginia State University, as well as other private holdings such as the papers of Dr. Archie G. Richardson, who was a pioneer in improving education for African-Americans..

The table shows when schools were started or taken down, sold or changed in a significant way. When a school was closed, our records sometimes show to where the pupils were “hailed,” which was the term then for transferring a population.

We are also a 501©(3) incorporated in the State of Virginia. Our HQ is the Edwin Washington Project, 26128 Talamore Drive, South Riding, Va. 20152; but the archives are at 20 High Street in Round Hill, which is only open Mon-Friday 8am to 5pm.

Description of the Report Table

- Column one is an alphabetical school listing. There will be repetition in names because if a school burned down or was closed for some other reason, a replacement with the same name might be erected. The table reports each “building.”
- Column two shows the designated race. Keep in mind that “color” or “c” is not a true race. Under Virginia law, anyone not considered white, was Colored, including Native Americans.
- Column three and four show when a school was open or closed, in some cases, when the land was purchased or sold. Finding precise dates isn’t always easy, so we anticipate corrections. This is also not a comprehensive list of every school built before integration; though we want to list all building operated between 1865 and integration, the priority being on colored schools. However, we know records of a great many are simply missing. We have not concerned ourselves with post-segregation dates, so it’s possible that schools closed after integration transpired.
- Column five shows the construction material, e.g. wood frame, metal roof, and often also shows other physical features. We recommend going to the cited sources for more information.
- Column six shows if we have a photograph of the school.
- Column seven shows the physical location of the school operated. Keep in mind that school district names changed over time from 1846, when they were numbered, to 1968. The on-line mapping product we are developing will show all those changes over time.
- Column eight shows a range of academic and attendance reports in the Edwin Washington archives

³²According to a study done in 1940, the building was built in 1915; but a memo from Superintendent O.L. Emerick, dated 2/2/1949, indicates that the Aldie High School was a two-story frame building constructed in 1916 containing both elementary and high school training from grades 1 through 11, to be expanded to grades 12. In 1949, the intent was to construct a new brick building. The school board had decided to build two new high schools, neither of which was at Aldie; meanwhile conditions in 1949 were considered intolerable at Aldie. (Emerick letter of August 29, 1949).

³³ In July, 1955, the land was expanded, we believe to accommodate elementary school children. See extract of minutes of County School Board meeting in 9.2.3 Aldie H.S. In 1954, the HS department closed and children were bused to Loudoun County High School in Leesburg. An undated paint order sheet showed that Aldie had a Science Room. A 1953/54 order had the same information. See 9.3 Paint Orders.

Scheel thought the building closed in 1910; but we know that Maggie Franklin instructed at Bears in 1917 (see 4.4 Superintendent's Record of Teacher's Certificates – 1914-1945), so perhaps like other schools with population problems like Conklin, it had periodic periods of closings and openings. That year transportation to the school was by horse-drawn wagon (see 12). The school was closed at some point and then reopened in 1924 (see 2.5B White Petitions). Usually, records distinctly indicate that school is colored. Records in Archives of the Circuit Court of Loudoun County indicate that the white Bluemont was purchased Oct 5, 1922. The 1914 Annual Report also speaks of Bluemont, but without a racial appellation, which usually means it is a white school. According to the “notable events of the year” portion of the 1914 report, Bluemont was expanded at the cost of $1,000. “The center itself is an old schoolhouse which opened in 1923, and served the community until the early 1960s. The school then sat empty until 1988 when the local community provided the spark to convert the building into a Community Center.” See <https://www.loudoun.gov/index.aspx?NID=1221>

¹³¹ In 1921/22, the blackboards were wood/slate, needing paint on the wood. The size of the lot was ½ acre and there was no flag on the school house. The fence was on three sides. In 1920/21 and 1921/22, the school also educated students from students from Mt. Gilead District, six in 1920/21 and eight in 1921/22. See 13, Brownsville Term Reports (1920-1922).

The first school was built on land purchased by the Mt. Gilead School District March 1, 1887 in Brownsville, an African-American community about a mile to the east of historic Hamilton)(see Emerick map of 1923). See also Deed Book 6Z, folio 154). Cost of construction was $3,000 for a one room frame building. (Source: Report of the Survey Committee on Long-Range Planning for Loudoun County, Part I and II, January, 1940, page 25.

By 1922 (and perhaps as early as 1916), and probably due to overcrowding, pupils attended both the Brownsville school house and the Odd Fellows Lodge in Hamilton. The Brownsville structure was then sold at auction on August 17, 1929 to E.L. Mc Farland. (see Deed Book 6Z, Folio 154 and Deed Book 10G, Folio 224). McFarland sold it to L.G. Brooks in 1930 for a small profit. (see Deed Book 10G, Folio 226). Brooks then sold the property on September 10 of that year, with the school house on it, back to the school system for $10, as a trust to pay off his debt to McFarland. (see Deed Book 10G, Folio 227). The old building continued to serve African-Americans until the 1946/47 academic year, when the students were hauled to the new Carver in Purcellville, as part of the consolidation process. In 2018, it is a private home. (Note: we have not yet researched when the structure went into private ownership.)

As for the Odd Fellows lodge, according to interviews, the school system used the first floor for studies. Deed records indicate this was done through an arrangement with the Trustees of the Masonic Lodge in 1922, paying $700 for that right, and also purchased some land between the lodge and the Mount Zion Church as well. (Deed Book 10D, Folio 297).

An understanding had been reached that the school had not been in use for many years. Research Point. More research on exact dates of operation are required. In the Balch Library is a collection This collection consists of two teacher's registers for Frankville School #11, located east of Belmont on the Leesburg Turnpike, in the Broad Run Magisterial District of Loudoun County. Frankville School was a segregated school for white children. The first register contains lists of students and attendance records for the years 1886-1894. It includes a visitors' log, end-of-term statistics, and lists of books used. Teachers during these years were Mollie Burch (fl. 1880s) and Horatio S. Stahl (1869-1935). The second register records the years 1898-1902, and also includes student names and attendance, as well as end-of-term statistics and books used. It also includes several descriptions of the schoolhouse. Teachers during these years included William Thomas Bauckman (d. 1930), Laura Stanton, J. Sterling Moran (1879-1960), and Bessie M. Wilson (fl. 1900).

²¹⁹ See SC 0054 Collection of the Balch Library.

²²⁰ Construction or additions more likely were made in 1918. See "Statement of Particulars" in Annual Report of Division Superintendent, for the School Year closing June 30, 1918. In 3.3 Annual School Reports 1887-88 to 1892-93 and 1906-07 to 1917-1918.

²²⁴ Also known simply as George's School, the structure burned down about May 1, 1907. It was rebuilt by the School Board without submitting plans or specifications, on the same foundation after August 1, 1907 at an estimated cost of $600, according to the 1907 report, but the 1908 report indicated a $970 was paid from local School Funds. According to Donna Kroiz, her family (the wire Family) donated the land. See "Statement of Particulars" in Report by L.M. ³¹² See 9 Deeds Schools and Construction\9.2.3 Colored Construction Files. Scheel places the beginnings of secondary education at the original Loudoun County High School, the second floor of the Union Street building, starting about 1910 with a non-accredited two year program, the nearest accredited program being in Manassas at the Manassas Industrial School which had begun with Jennie Dean. The Loudoun Program was known more often as the Loudoun County Training Center, a term which was invented by the Superintendent of Public Instruction in Richmond, in consultation with the Jeanes and Slater Funds. The schools were to be set up in every county with the best teachers and for the best students. They were even supposed to train teachers, part of the reason for the name. That last function was dropped quickly, and as Scheel implied in his 2003 article, the name was political, white politicians not wanting to provide a real high school for African-Americans. That would not occur until 1941 with Douglass High School. It's also worth noting that because public transportation for African-Americans didn't begin until 1937,

Converse of Philadelphia wanted the loan an oil painting of his grandfather, Freeman Converse who between 1830-1846 was President of the Old Leesburg Academy. Leesburg High School agreed to loan it indefinitely; however, Converse had to return if requested. Note. Property is now owned by Drexel University. The academy was chartered in 1799, built next to the courthouse in 1844 and then moved to 102 North Street in 1873. It was not able to withstand the competition of free public education and closed in 1879, at which point the Board of Supervisors purchased the building, which is now part of the Loudoun County Courthouse Complex. Also in 1879 the Leesburg High School moved into the building. The structure on north street burned down in 1893 and 1925. Then in 1954, as a result of the consolidation movement, Loudoun County High school opened in Leesburg as the one high school for white children. ³⁹⁹ "One of the simplest forms found among the surveyed church buildings is the former Antioch Methodist Church in Lovettsville (DHR #053-0697). Prior to 1868, residents of Lovettsville and the surrounding area organized a Methodist Episcopal congregation. On August 11, 1868, the church trustees purchased a lot at the northwestern end of the town where Broad Way intersected with the Berlin Turnpike. Around 1875, the lot was labeled on a town plat as the —African Chapel III lot. The circa-1880, one-story frame, front-gable building that occupies the site today may have replaced an earlier structure. The building served both as a chapel and as a school building for African-American children in the community. The site also contains a cemetery with marked graves that date back to 1890." Note: On April 24, 2017, Ed of the Lovettsville Historical Society showed me a photo likely of the old colored school in Lovettsville, though owners of AME dispute this. It was a school --both according to local histories, and also a deed the society has from 1878 uses the school on that intersection (what is now South Loudoun and South Locust Streets) as a point of reference. The structure is still there but has been expanded and converted into a dwelling. The book The German Settlement on page 102 says that this was the black school prior to the African Chapel [Antioch AME] being used as the black school. A similar story is in Recollections of Lovettsville by Walter Bernard Williams, who described the original Black School as a jail in later years and then a home. Recommendation: The EWP make defining the history of Black schooling n Lovettsville a special project.

⁴⁶³ See 9.1 (Middleburg (w), 1960. The original structure was created 1911 at a cost of $8,000. An auditorium was added in 1929 at a cost of $13,000. Another addition was added in 1960 at a cost of $110,665 (exclusive of equipment). The addition consisted of 3 classrooms, a clinic, office, library, teacher’s lounge, new toilets, and the auditorium was converted into a multi-purpose room. 1910 and 4 room construction over 3 acres is proposed by “Statement of Particulars” in Annual Report of the Superintendent of Schools for the Year ending June 30, 1910 in 3.3 Annual School Reports (1887/88 to 1892/93 1906/07 to 1917/18). See also Table 6 in Report by L.M. Shumate, for Schools Closing June 30 1911 in 3.3 Annual School Reports (1887/88 to 1892/93 1906/07 to 1917/18). Total cost was listed as $5,000 on which structure was set upon 3 acres and consisted of 4 rooms. $2500 was borrowed from the Literary Fund and $21600 from private contributions. 1915 as the construction date with an addition in 1927 was proposed by “Insurance Analysis” blue photo album in 11.2.

⁴⁶⁴ Editorial Note: Once we have scanned all deed and property records, reexamine the Middleburg Files to make sure the sequences of structures is precise. According to a paper dated 1960, the original structure was built in 1911 for $8,000. An auditorium was then added in 1929 for $13,000. The 1960 addition was completed at a cost of $110,665 (exclusive of equipment. See \9 Deeds Schools and Construction\9.1 Deeds\9.1 Deeds White\9.1 White Middleburg. On July 30, a meeting was held at the Lucketts school house to discuss how to find funds for an addition. Similarly a meeting was held at the Middleburg school for the same purpose. This was because the Attorney General ruled that the school board could not borrow money under the special act of the General Assembly authorizing such loans, due an amendment to the Virginia Constitution adopted on June 19. ⁴⁸⁹ Research. Needs to be examined. See 6.6 General Lists – Student Enrollment Cards for Mountain. Continued to insure building until June 15, 1930, when the insurance was cancelled. See 11.1 Insurance Record (1924-57)(pg 25 and 52.) The record is confusing. I came across a petition from 1952 for the Mountain School, (filled in 2.5B). This memo has created a bit of a problem for me because our records indicate the school was probably closed in 1924/25 academic year, though we also know the building was insured in 1930. Perhaps the school might not have been open. Perhaps it simply stayed standing as a storage facility, and the route kept the name but took kids elsewhere; that's just my idea though, as no description of the actual destination is in the petition. I also examined 4.4 Superintendent's Record of Teacher's Certificates – 1914-1945). The last time Mountain appeared was 1923/24 when Mary Wharton of Round Hill was the instructor. She only instructed another year at Airmont, according to her Teacher Record.

In 1872, the state of Virginia adopted public schools, and built the Mountain Shadow School in Bluemont. Now a private residence. (Friends of Bluemont n.d.) now Thomas F. Rust House): Detached house now; formerly a school. Vernacular. 1872 with later additions. Wood frame -3 (weatherboard); 1% stories; gable roof (composition); 1 shed dormer; 3 bays; 1-story, 7-bay shed-roof porch with Doric columns. Mountain Shadow School, although compromised by additions and alterations, adds visual interest to the streetscape. The original school is an important landmark in Bluemont.

LCPS Enrollment records, the school was continuously in service from 1924/25 (after being closed one year) through the 1932/33 academic year. It was then closed until 1942, so perhaps opened in a new building.

⁵⁴³ According to See 11.3 Valuation Schedules (1947-1955), contents were still insured in 1952. See also Virginia Teachers Term Reports for Nokes in 6.3.2. However, we have a report through to 1948, so either we are then talking about a third building or Nokes wasn't actually sold in 1935. Enrollment cards (6.6 General Lists – Student Enrollment Cards for Nokes) shows the school was closed in 1953/54 and the pupils moved to Floris in Fairfax County on the border. Cards exist for 1917-1953/53. No school in 1923/24 and closed 1933/34 – 1941/42. In 1949 School took up joint building to accommodate 90 “colored” children along border. the second generation of Carters sold acreage to the Adamses, and they built the schoolhouse that stands today. The public school system then bought it from the Adamses. I know little about the colored school that was built down Gap Road, not far from the white one room schoolhouse. The schoolhouse we use today was bought by the National Trust in the 1970s. The term "Oatlands" was used for anything roughly in the geographic area of the Oatlands mansion and/or Oatlands Mill on Goose Creek. If I had to guess, the record is for the schoolhouse for white children, built by the Adamses and purchased by the public school system, then by the National Trust in the 1970s.

⁵⁹⁰ According to Wikipedia, “roughcast or pebbledash is a coarse plaster surface used on outside walls that consists of lime and sometimes cement mixed with sand, small gravel, and often pebbles or shells. The materials are mixed into a slurry and are then thrown at the working surface with a trowel or scoop. The idea is to maintain an even spread, free from lumps, ridges or runs and without missing any background.”

⁵⁹² Since 1987, building has operated as the Philomont Community Center by the Loudoun County Department of Parks and Recreation. While serving as a school, the large upper room was used for special events, town meetings and plays. From 1945 to 1961, the building housed religious services for the Church of the Seventh Day Adventist. It was then used as a private residence until the County took possession in 1987. By 1884 the children attended school in Powell’s Grove, and adults organized a Methodist congregation that shared the building until 1897. Then, white resident Lucien Powell, a noted artist and former Confederate soldier, and his wife Nannie sold them a plot of land for one dollar. Together the members sank a well and built Powell’s Grove Methodist Church, which was on a circuit with Lincoln. The church burned down in 1907 and worshippers again used the school until they rebuilt in 1922. "According historian Eugene Scheel, recently freed slaves settled Powell's Grove in the late 1860s. The community settled on land owned by John Levin Powell, grandson of Levin Powell, the founder of the town of Middleburg. In 1884, Powell's son, noted artist Lucien Whiting Powell, sold a quarter-acre of land to the Mount Gilead School District. See page 50 of <https://www.loudoun.gov/DocumentCenter/Home/View/6978> "Purcellville "Colored" School was originally built in 1919 by a private group Joseph Newton Cook (1866-1935), Luther Stuart and George W. Lee formed the Willing Workers Club on February 3, 1914. The club's goal was to erect a school for African-American children in Purcellville. The idea had been initiated by Joseph and Lena Cook whose youngest daughter had contracted scarlet fever and could no longer make the two-mile walk to the Lincoln Colored School. On March 15, 1917, the Willing Workers purchased the present property for $200. Joseph Cook, a stonemason and carpenter, built the schoolhouse, which opened in September 1919. The school, known as Willing Workers Hall, operated privately as Purcellville's only primary school for African Americans until 1937 when the property was sold to the school board. It is now the Lyles Funeral Home in Purcellville.

According to Mark Gunderman, who is restoring the building, (6/15/2017) the Old Sterling schoolhouse still stands at 1000 Ruritan Circle, not far from the corner of Atlantic Blvd. and West Church Road. According to Loudoun Historian Eugene Scheel, Broad Run School District No. 6 purchased the acre lot on October 11, 1879 from Dr. James E. Warner at a discount price of $60. The school was completed and ready for the spring term in 1880 and served until 1947 when it was replaced by the modern all brick Sterling Elementary ⁷⁰⁰ According to Mark Gunderman (6/15/2017), the school closed in 1947 and the county sold the building to Herbert Keene on November 20, 1947 for $3,100. Keene, a farmer, renovated the building by partitioning it off into six rooms. It was a family rental until Grandma Betty Geoffroy leased the building and established the very successful Sterling Schoolhouse Antiques from 1982 through 2007. The antique shop, located specialized in venerable furniture and quilts, and featured dishware, dry sinks, jelly cupboards, lamps, pictures, knickknacks, trunks and more. Since 2007, the property has been used by a landscaping company and a heavy equipment operator to park vehicles.

The cost of construction of the consolidated school was $12,000. See “Notable Events of the Year” in Annual Report of the Division Superintendent of Schools for Loudoun County for School Year closing June 30, 1916. and Report of Aug 13, 1917 in 3.3 Annual School Reports 1887-88 to 1892-93 and 1906-07 to 1917-1918.

Only the stone wall remains. After the school burned, the students were transferred to Round Hill. The memoranda on the insurance implications goes into significant detail on construction costs and losses. The flyer for commissioner’s sale in the folder shows the property was improved with a school building, but that statement was also penciled out. See also 9.2 Sunny Ridge for details on several buildings. Five acre lot, improved by a building of undescribed construction. Also served as town's Negro church through 1892. 1868 is given 9 Deeds Schools and Construction\9.2.3 Colored Construction Files.

⁷⁶⁰ The African-American school was the first public school in Waterford, followed by the school for whites, followed by a school for white in the 1870's. 1868 saw Sarah Ann Steer (1837-1914) was the first teacher of Waterford Colored School. Source Loudoun Discovered, Vol V, pg. 20. "1957 is the date we have always used for the closing of the "colored" school (with students transported to Leesburg to consolidated schools, NOT integrated in Waterford until 1968), but I do not have a source for that." The BLACK school was the first public school in the village; the WHITE school came some time after 1870 with reconstruction. At some time as of 1890 there was a much smaller school on the property, possibly called The Waterford Academy (though a second, earlier building on the edge of town goes by the same name), which may have been private, OR was the precursor to the Old school. ⁷⁸⁷ A report by Mildred Weadon showed her delivering hot lunches to this school January 1, April 13, 1934. See 5.5 Home Economics 1934-35. Superintendent O.L. Emerick worried about Watson in 1930, indicating it was in immediate need of an additional room. See “1930/31 Budget” in 8.1 Financial 1928/29-1938/39.

⁷⁸⁸ The 1938/39 Va. Teacher’s Term Report (see 6.3.2) indicated the school had no furniture of any kind, desks, chairs, teacher’s desk, or equipment. Nor was there a library. This might be explained by term reports from the 1920’s which spoke of the school being in a church. In other words, any furniture used would have been owned by the Church.

We should figure out when closed. Question. Was this “First Baptist Church of Watson-- organized on November 29, 1896 under the leadership of Reverend Douglas D. Fisher and Reverend Bush W. Murray?. The first church building was erected on land donated by one of the founding members, Samuel Thornton. The building burned in 1955 and was replaced by the present one-story, concrete block structure in 1957 (DHR #053-5087-0009). Wheatland Convict Camp							Not a school. Little is known of this facility, except that in 1937scoops with wheels from the camp were used for the Lovettsville School Addition, which is why listed here. Only example of convict labor used in school system as of this report ⁷⁹⁶ .

⁷⁹⁷ The school house was moved from its original location (still to be determined) to a nearby corner the Floris District in 1903 (Fairfax Herald, 12/4/1903). By 1925, the decision was to sell the building (Fairfax Herald 1/30/1925); but the bids were rejected as too low in May (Herald Observer 5/7/1925). The sale actually didn't occur until 1931 (Fairfax Herald, 4/10/1931). For copies of the newspaper articles, go to the Virginia Room, Fairfax Regional Library in Fairfax.

⁷⁹⁸ We did speak to a former Loudoun LCPS student who attended Bears and felt such a school existed; but after examining her records more carefully, was uncertain.. We found a photo of students who were identified for a White Willard dated from 1916 with a brick wall as a backdrop. Teachers were Mr. Gallaher and Zelma Roller (Marshall). However, we have since determined that the students and the teacher were at a different school. See Arcola Elementary School, Reunion, 2014, edited by David Church, et al.(archives of Wynne Saffer). See also 4.4 Superintendent's Record of Teacher's Certificates, 1915-1946, which listed all schools in that year. Later in 2018, we were able to document the White School, after reviewing records in Fairfax County. There appear however to be none in Loudoun County

⁷⁹⁹ See Dranesville District School Board Minutes (1886-1922), Microfilm V 379.153 D in the Virginia Room of the Fairfax Regional Library. The minutes from December 30, 1913 reflected the participation by Mr. Philip Johnston Coleman of the BroadRun District in Loudoun who agreed with the Dranesville district to co-fund operations and teacher salaries, since students from both counties attended the school house.

⁸⁰² Was supposed to have been torn down in 1933/34 but wasn't. (See Memo of Dec 28, 1933 in 9.4.1 CWA). "Near Shiloh, usually called just the Willard Church, stood Willard School, an 1890s weatherboard one-roomer finely built with tongue-and-groove wood-lined walls inside. After lower Loudoun schools for black children consolidated at the brick Oak Grove School in 1948, Willard School was jacked up, hitched onto John B. Hornbaker's threshing machine and rolled three miles north to the place of Eugene Beard, no relation to Ernest G. It spent its last years there as an outbuilding near Coleman's School, the white children's one-roomer." According to enrollment cards held by LCPS, the school was open 1917/18-1918/19, then closed 1919-1921. Open again 1921-1923. Closed 1923/24. Open 1924-26. Closed 1926-1930.

⁸⁰⁶ See 9.2.3 Colored Construction Files. After the building burned down, the school system agreed to replace it with a public school in the 1918-1921 time frame. The property also contained the cemetery for some reason, instead of deeding it to community. It is still part of the deed. See "Budget for 1930-31" in 8.1 Financial 1928-29 – 1938-39. then. Leave it to the good ole Georges to make a big profit! Haha It's a beautiful spot for a school with a spring close by to get the water for students to drink. My great aunt remembered being sent to the spring with a bucket to bring back water—she loved getting out of classes! She and her sisters used to ride their horses to school and then immediately send the horses back home to the barn by themselves. Quite a different life style!"

Comments on Sources

In addition to original documents in the Edwin Washington Archives, the material in this special report benefited from consultations with the staff of the Balch Library, especially Mary Fishback, and the Archives of the Circuit Court of Loudoun County as well as the Archives of the Circuit Court of Fairfax County. Historians Wynne Saffer and Eugene M. Scheel also deserve special mention. Mr. Saffer does a lot of research examining deeds, which proved critical to our understanding of school properties. In addition, Mr. Scheel, a cartographer and historian developed a series of books known as Loudoun Discovered, (Scheel, Loudoun Discovered (Volumes 1-5) 2002), from which we derived much information. This series is available in the Loudoun County libraries and is a must read for anyone wanting to know about county history. It's worth noting that Mr. Scheel began his research in 1975 when he published a series of articles in the Loudoun Times Mirror. We also interview students and former instructors from the segregated era, such as Louis Jett, who studied at Carver. Louis has been studying "black history" for decades and lives in a former school house. Also noteworthy is the Records Office of the Loudoun County Public Schools, which originally commissioned the study, and of course the Black History Committee of the Friends of the Balch Library. We also wish to recognize the research of Kevin Grigsby and the Lee sisters on Willisville, the Lincoln Historical Foundation, the Purcellville Historical Society and the Library of Virginia, Oatlands Plantation, the archives of Foxcroft and Roger Vance, Mayor of Hillsboro.

Supporting the Research

The Edwin Washington Project is the first organized effort to fully document the impact of segregated education on African-Americans in Loudoun County. The cost of preserving and studying the records is covered by private contributions. Please contribute to the Edwin Washington Project, a non-profit, 501(c)(3), registered with the State of Virginia and the IRS. If you would like to contribute a donation of any size, just send a check to the Edwin Washington Project, 26128 Talamore Drive, South Riding, VA 20152.

School Numbers:

“Colored Schools” were sometimes given letters and sometimes were numbered. The following chart shows their numbers in 1938/39. See Edwin Washington catalog Folder 1.7 Misc Civil Rights Records, 1938/39 Socio-Economic Survey of Negro Life in Virginia. Note: The number 39 is used twice.

The number of “colored schools” which existed varied from time to time, including those that were insured. For example, three in 1895, twenty one in 1918, twenty seven in 1924, seventeen in 1935 and nine in 1958.
