

of a high school education and if they really want it, no matter where the four year school is located they will keep on and get a complete high school education. Lincoln made the first start in higher education and I do not think it should be taken away from them because of a fire.

T. JANNEY BROWN FOR LINCOLN:

I do not feel a bit out of place here today. I come from Washington, but my heart is in Loudoun County, Virginia. I have listened with a great deal of interest to the talks made today. I take a great deal of interest in the High School. My uncle and other members of the family contributed to build it. We have always looked upon Lincoln with a great deal of pride, where my father and my mother-in-law went to school; so we are a little in favor of Lincoln. That may be sentiment, but today educational institutions that are built in the cities are moving out. Take the high school * * * Hopkins has also moved out. Most of the higher institutions are being taken out of the city. Where the Lincoln High School is situated, I think it better than a metropolis like Purcellville. I should hate to see it in this town and get the spirit of commercialism. I have it and I know what it does to one. Many think that education has as its ultimate goal dollars and cents. It has the building of character, it has the psychology, it has the truth and it has justice. With this tract there they ought to be able to do great things. The next step is college. They may not go, but they are in line for it. They want the trees, the orchard; they want everything Lincoln has and Purcellville has to start afresh. They would have to go a mile out and I cannot see why Purcellville cannot go a little farther and take the spirit and moral influence and all that is
